A Wife Learns How Best to Really Help December 1947 Vol. 4 No. 7 Grapevine

It was after one--the last one--of our numerous separations. I was waiting, with a combination of the usual fervent hope and skepticism, for my husband's usual repentant promises.

And then, "You've been no help to me!" he said.

The words were a dash of cold water on me. I had been no help? Why, I had not only helped, I had practically carried the whole burden--paid the bills, the rent, the debts, told lies, covered up--every wife of an alcoholic knows the story. And that was the thanks I got!

But my husband was absolutely right. I had been no help to him. The shock brought me up short and I began to take stock, and that point marks the beginning of my regeneration as a person--to which all else is incidental.

Some of the mistakes I had been making may be of interest to others. (All thinking wives will recognize them.) I had rather fancied myself as a good wife. I was even pointed out as an example of a good wife. I was familiar with the book Alcoholics Anonymous, had attended meetings and thought I understood the 12 Steps. But I understood them in this way, that I placed all the emphasis on my husband's alcoholism, thinking that he was the problem in my life. My holier-than-thou attitude must indeed have been trying.

Soon, I began to understand that I was my own problem, that I fairly swarmed with faults and deficiencies, prejudices, notions, neuroses, crooked thinking, cockeyed emotions, rampaging interior conflicts, feelings of fear and insecurity and doubt and suspicion. And I learned that application of the 12 Steps would begin to change my personality so that I would be a better person, a happier person, a more mature person. No fault can stand up against persistent application of the 12 Steps. As our thoughts change, our actions change. Remember, it's no good trying to change our actions without first changing our thoughts. With the change in thoughts and actions there comes a change in personality, and finally in consciousness, so that what was deliberate effort at first becomes a continuous and unchanging attitude of being.

Another mistake:--I had felt responsible for my husband, for his drinking and his sobriety, for his whole life. I practically tried to keep him in diapers. This is a very common form of wifely possessiveness, under which any man will chafe at the bit. I had to learn to understand that I am responsible only for my own thoughts and actions. To arrogate to myself more is sheer conceit. In order to grow out of that mistaken thinking I had to learn to be detached, to be non-attached. I had supposed that detachment meant indifference--a prevalent mistake. It means that I keep my foolish little emotions out of the cog wheels of relationship and circumstance. It means that I gain, step by step, more and more perspective, so that instead of seeing in a distorted fashion a tiny section of the picture I see more of the whole picture with the clear vision of serene and balanced emotions.

Another mistake:--I had felt very noble about being the family mainstay. My attitude of "Look at poor me and look at that heel!" was certainly not conducive to a happy marriage. I learned that the gift without the giver is indeed bare. I learned that the gift with the giver is riches and joy to overflowing.

Secretary - Brian H

Review of minutes for August InterGroup Meeting as published in September Pass It On. Minutes approved by acclamation.

Treasurer - Steve P

Slightly in the red for both the month and the year, as we often are at this time in the year. Group/Individual contributions are significantly down in comparison to the previous two years. Minor increases in operating expenses. Sales are fine but proceeds from sales do not contribute much to the operating budget of Central Office. Treasurer's Report accepted by acclamation.

Service Coordinator - Michael W

Not present.

Alternate Coordinator - Kathy H

Standard month. Neither Michael nor Kathy had to take the night phone; up a little on walk-in traffic. Generally strong on desk-worker coverage. Contact Central Office to become involved as a desk volunteer, either to cover an open regular shift or as a substitute. Grateful to be of service.

Activities Coordinator – Martha G (Interim)

Old-Timer's Appreciation Meeting (12-3 pm, 11/1) has been rescheduled so as not to conflict with the Traditions Conference. Districts 11 will sponsor the next InterGroup Speaker meeting on the 12/13 of December. Location TBA – contact Central Office to confirm details. Planning for Alkathon continues. Contact Martha G or Central Office to become involved in volunteering for the Alkathon. More will be revealed. Please continue to let people know about the opportunity to serve as Activities Coordinator, as well as the many opportunities to volunteer at the Alkathon.

Member at Large - Martha G

Received one request via the website from a government agency for some literature. Will fulfill the request (with schedules and selected pamphlets). If you are interested in being available for Community Outreach events, contact John S. or Central Office to get listed in John's "Black Book" as a volunteer for Community Outreach events.

Another mistake:--I thought that happiness meant financial security and total lack of troubles. In other words, I wanted my life to drift along effortlessly on a rosy cloud, with God in fairly constant attendance, and I was raising particular hell because it didn't. I learned, instead, that happiness comes with the peace of mind that follows acceptance of growing and maturing as the greatest adventure of life; I learned that happiness comes with serenity that can rise above any situation or circumstance. I learned that happiness lies entirely within myself, in my own integrity and peace of mind, and in my own expansion of awareness. And I learned that only with detachment from selfish and possessive emotions can love, so-called, become real love. To be able to love, unselfishly, understandingly, undemanding and expecting no return, increasing in depth and scope as our horizons widen, no matter what the circumstance, is a mark of maturity.

Love holds infinitely more for me than it did before, when it was bounded by my limited concepts and confined within the narrow horizons of my selfish little being. Love carries on, joyously. Love understands. Love is peace of mind. Love is compassion. Love loves! Love transcends the merely human husband-wife relationship and becomes an expression of divine love, divine strength.

As wives, some of us have a continuing alcoholic problem. Some alcoholics are unable yet to accept or practice the 12 Steps, unable to let the miracle of regeneration come forth under the guidance and care of God. But the wife who grows as she no longer tries to "help" by her old blundering methods, learns to stand by during this time and help in the only way possible, by understanding and loving. She learns that the only help one human being can give another is of divine origin, flowing through her increasingly as she grows in love and peace of mind.

I have caught a glimpse of this vision, like a frog squinting up at a star from the bottom of a well. And I shall spend the rest of my life climbing up toward that vision.
